

He's a martial arts expert, decorated soldier, a captivating speaker in demand world-wide, advisor to business and government leaders, and a motivation guru...

They call him 'The Warrior'

AT 16, Simon Treseyan was one of the youngest karate black belts in the United Kingdom.

He went onto an Army career with the elite British 'Special Forces' unit, mostly in covert operations, and has been decorated for gallantry.

In the years since, this high achiever and motivator has also achieved excellence in the private sector, briefing high-profile corporate leaders and dignitaries, including a UK prime Minister, on matters of security.

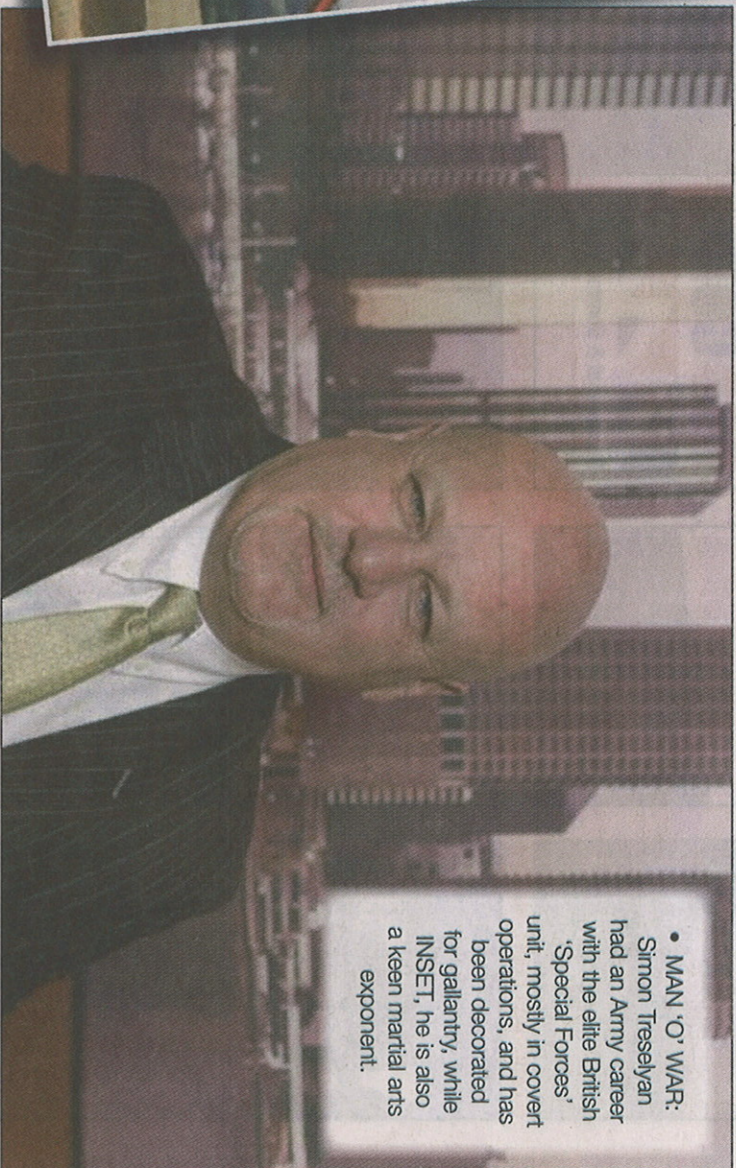

Now a successful businessman in Australia, people literally walk over broken glass or hot coals for Simon, and he's been invited to do a 'show and tell' at a Mildura seminar in February, organised by Sunrayisa motivator and business-woman Pix Jonasson (see her story Page 24).

This determined, passionate and successful entrepreneur wants to help Sunrayisa people kickstart 2009 by discovering how Simon's Special Forces techniques and attitude can lift them to new levels of self-achievement.

"True and lasting success can be followed very much like a recipe," she says. "The correct ingredients with the correct preparation and timing will produce excellent results time and time again."

She says her "Success Factor" Seminar, to be held at the Settlers Mildura on Thursday, February 19, from 7pm, should be a highly entertaining and action-packed event. "I had the pleasure of doing a 'Starfire Training' seminar with Simon last year, kept in touch with him, and was delighted when he agreed to come to Mildura for one of my seminars," said Pix, CEO of local company Success Dynamics 21C.

"Simon has 27 years of Martial Arts and Military Special Forces experience, and has the recipe for success in many areas.

• MAN 'O' WAR: Simon Treseyan had an Army career with the elite British 'Special Forces' unit, mostly in covert operations, and has been decorated for gallantry, while INSET, he is also a keen martial arts exponent.

"He has had the privilege of leading extraordinary people in extreme situations to attain remarkable results."

Simon has taken his 'Starfire' seminars to nine countries, speaking on his military career, and life as an interrogator, lecturer, negotiator, author, advisor and martial arts expert.

He achieved some fame in the United Kingdom as the person responsible for identifying the fake Iraq torture photographs featured in the Daily Mirror newspaper, and subsequently in the media world-wide. His continued high-profile TV and press campaign on the issue was taken into the British Parliament, where his conclusions on the fake pictures were proved correct.

His investigations saved the Government from severe embarrassment, and resulted in the sacking of Daily Mirror editor Piers Morgan.

Daily Mirror editor Piers Morgan. Pix describes Simon as one of the most sought-after personal and corporate development master trainers on the international scene, and believes that with his expert help, her Mildura seminar will motivate and encourage people to turn fear into power, dispel self-limiting beliefs and create action in their stead, discover acute mental focus and concentration, experience the power of influence, create strategies for winning, attain supreme confidence in most situations, create greater passion and vibrancy in life, and turn dreams and desires into results and achievements.

"He uses techniques born of the most extreme environments and 'hones' them into effective and powerful lessons for attaining excellence in the modern world," she said. "His work has inspired thousands of people world-wide to embrace extraordinary training in order to achieve extraordinary results."

"Simon is also one of the few registered 'Firewalk Master Trainers' on the planet, and is a regular on television and radio, and in the print media."

His first book, 'Who Dares for Success?' is due to be published early this year.

Pix described Simon as lively and humorous in nature, and passionate in style. "It is little wonder that people who listen to him are inspired to take action steps to further their own success," she said.

"It is a real privilege to have someone of Simon's calibre coming to Mildura."

Pix said she had tried, at $55 for general admission, to put the unique seminar within the reach of most people. Other corporate pricing would be advertised.

Businesses or individuals interested in the seminar, or those wanting to know more, can contact Pix by email on pix@successdynamics21.com or by phone on 0418 211 738.
